Day Habilitation offers to participants the appropriate means necessary to participate, recreate, integrate, contribute, and to involve themselves in the community in which they live. Day Habilitation offers choice for people with developmental disabilities, because individualization is the key to a participant's success in day habilitation. Participants are able to make long lasting friendships with each other through the Day Hub Program. Participants volunteer throughout the Hudson Valley region. They are involved in community activities such as shopping, dining, bowling (for fun and Special Olympics), swimming at the local YMCA and fishing. Program Participants like being able to choose, and that is what it is all about. The participants shape the program, a program full of nurturing, recreation, and fulfillment. Day Habilitation provides social inclusion among peers, interaction within the community and a sense of self-pride.

When people spend too much time alone, they can become withdrawn and isolated. Being part of a vibrant community engaged in shared pursuits is key to every person's wellbeing, no matter their ability. Day Hab programs at YAI offer people with disabilities a ready-made peer community that engages in skills-building, recreation, and volunteer activities in the neighborhood. They also provide easy access to other forms of support and a pathway to pre-vocational and employment training. In addition to traditional day Hab, YAI offers several Without Walls (WOW) programs whose services are integrated within communities. WOW offers individualized and group activities designed to teach life and community safety skills, build relationships, promote independence, provide volunteer opportunities, and build vocational skills. The focus is on each person's strengths while participating in the larger community.
